"histoire d'un projet - commande - contraintes construction - maîtrise d'ouvrage - métier d'architecte règlements..."

Nous avons souhaité lancer en l'an 2000, un cycle intitulé, «1 architecte - 1 bâtiment » au cours duquel des architectes reconnus sont venus et viendront au Pavillon de l'Arsenal évoquer l'histoire d'un de leurs projets réalisé en France ou ailleurs.

Ce cycle de conférence doit permettre au grand public de comprendre comment se fait l'architecture et de lui faire découvrir le métier d'architecte à travers l'histoire d'un projet.

Les maîtres d'œuvre invités, français ou étrangers, présenteront chronologiquement toute l'histoire d'un de leurs projets, de la commande jusqu'à sa réalisation et à son appropriation par l'utilisateur.

Ces conférences permettent de mieux appréhender les contraintes rencontrées par les maîtres d'œuvre, de découvrir les liens tissés avec le maître d'ouvrage et les différents intervenants, de connaître les réflexions des architectes sur la commande et sur les règlements qui varient selon les villes, selon les pays.

Régulièrement d'autres architectes viendront ainsi nous parler, de projets, d'échelles et de programmes différents.

Dominique ALBA
Directrice Générale du Pavillon de l'Arsenal

MVRDV

Company Profile

MVRDV was set up in Rotterdam (NL) in 1993 by Winy Maas, Jacob van Rijs and Nathalie de Vries. In close collaboration the 3 principal architect directors produce designs and studies in the fields of architecture, urbanism and landscape design. Early projects such as the headquarters for the Public Broadcasting Company VPRO and the WoZoCo housing for elderly in Amsterdam brought MVRDV to the attention of a wide field of clients and gave them international acclaim.

Realized projects include the Dutch Pavilion for the World EXPO 2000 in Hannover, an innovative business park 'Flight Forum' in Eindhoven, the Silodam Housing complex in Amsterdam, the Matsudai Cultural Centre in Japan, Unterföhring office campus near Munich, the Lloyd Hotel in Amsterdam, an urban plan and housing in The Hague Ypenburg, the rooftop - housing extension Didden Village in Rotterdam, the cultural Centre De Effenaar in Eindhoven, the boutique shopping building Gyre in Tokyo, Veldhoven's Maxima Medical Centre and the iconic Mirador housing in Madrid.

The grand variety of projects continues in the work of the office. Current projects in progress or on site include various housing projects in the Netherlands, Spain, China, France, Austria, the United Kingdom, USA and other countries, a television centre for Zürich, a public library in Spijkenisse (NL), a central market hall in Rotterdam, a culture plaza in Nanjing, China, large scale urban masterplans in Oslo, Norway and in Tirana, Albania, a masterplan for an eco-city in Logrono, Spain and a research masterplan for the future of greater Paris.

The more than sixty architects, designers and staff members of MVRDV are organized into teams headed by project leaders. In each team, different fields and scales of MVRDV's projects are reflected, both in the (international) background of team members and in the variation of work. To allow a wide range of commissions to be handled, special design teams are set up for individual commissions.

Each design team is led by one of the principal architects (Winy Maas, Jacob van Rijs or Nathalie de Vries) and a senior architect / project manager. Based on the scope of the work in the different phases designers and specialists will be added to the team. The senior architect is responsible for the day-to-day communication and organization. The design team will be assisted by advisors in the fields of building and installation technology, building sciences, building management and building costs. In this way MVRDV's generalism and verve is linked with the specialization and thoroughness of the other team members.

At an early stage of the design process MVRDV involves as many users and advisors as viable. Reactions to the first designs can be processed quickly, creating a high degree of support for the design and encouraging the sort of new insights that can lead to specific innovative solutions. MVRDV works all over the world and therefore is used to collaborate with local architects, construction groups and specialists. MVRDV has a wide knowledge and experience in working with collective contracts, insurances and planning documents that create a base for collective approaches. MVRDV has permanent relationships with engineering firms to activate the exchange of up to date knowledge.

The work of MVRDV is published and exhibited worldwide and received many international awards. The monographic publications FARMAX (1998) and KM3 (2005) illustrate the work of the Rotterdam based office.

Didden Village

Rotterdam, The Netherlands (2002-2007)

The first realization in MVRDV's hometown Rotterdam is a rooftop house extension.

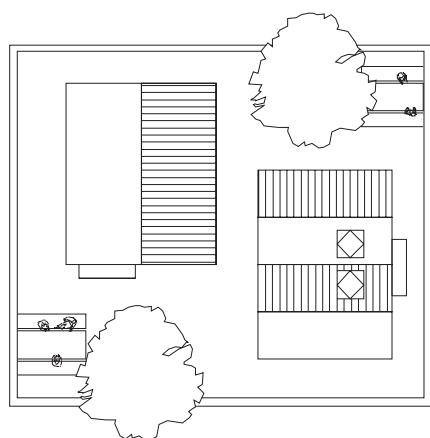

On top of an existing monumental house and atelier, the bedrooms are positioned as separate houses, optimizing the privacy of every member of the family. The houses are distributed in such a way that a series of plazas, streets and alleys appear as a mini-village on top of the building.

Parapet walls with windows surround the new village. Trees, tables, open-air showers and benches are added, optimizing the rooftop life. By finishing all elements with a blue poly-urethane coating a new "heaven" appears. It creates a crown on top of the monument.

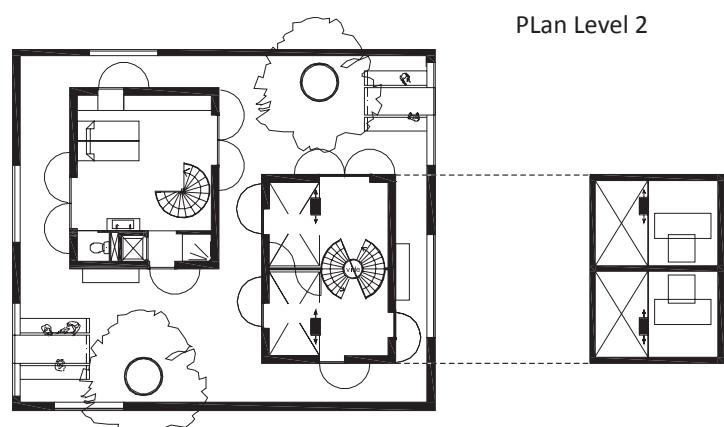

The addition can be seen as a prototype for a further densification of the old and existing city. It adds a roof life to the city. It explores the costs for the beams, infrastructure, and extra finishes and it ultimately aims to be lower than the equivalent ground price.
